

SHORT COURSE

Kayaker Andrew under way again

TEACHER and adventurer Andrew Hughes is back on the water after a medical emergency interrupted his kayak journey around Papua New Guinea. After a sore knee turned into a major infection, Andrew called for help on May 28 and was admitted to hospital.

He spent several weeks recuperating from a cellulitis infection in his left knee and returned to the water on Sunday, very thankful for the care he had received. "Even in a welcoming place like PNG, the people of Alotau and Milne Bay Province have a reputation for being special. It's true," Andrew wrote on his website. Follow Andrew's adventure at www.expeditionclass.com

26 – MERCURY

Tuesday, June 17, 2008